

Surveillance Camera Use Policy

RRPC has surveillance cameras on the club property to provide security and oversight of its buildings, ranges and real estate. Members and guests are advised of the cameras upon entering the club's property and may not "opt out" of having their presence there recorded.

The images taken by the cameras are stored on hard drive(s) that belong to the club and are under the sole control of the Board of Directors. The Board shall have the singular power to determine how, when and why the cameras and images captured by them are used as well as selecting those individuals who are allowed password access to the system.

Club members, in good standing and at the convenience of the Board or those so authorized, may request to see a demonstration of how the cameras work, see their field of view and have certain parts of the recorded record played back for them as an example of how the system functions.

No one shall make or distribute copies of the recorded images gathered by the camera system without the Board's specific advanced written authorization. Nor shall anyone, without formal Board authorization, act to block, disconnect or otherwise disable any part of the camera system or hard drive recording(s) devices. Furthermore; persons wishing to review the recorded images as part of a formal investigation shall make a written request to the Board asking for authorization and access to recorded images.

Failure to abide by this policy will result in disciplinary action against the violator(s) up to and including dismissal from the club, as allowed by the Bylaws.
